

His Mercies Are New Every Morning

Today's Scripture: Lamentations 3:22-23

Before We Begin

I invite you to open your Bible and read today's Scripture. Before you begin, close your eyes and ask the Lord to help you hear what He's speaking to you. Open your eyes and read the passage, then close them again and sit still for a moment.

Read it one more time and pay attention to what stands out.

Something I've Been Wondering

Mercies. What are His mercies, and what does that mean for me when I wake up tomorrow morning?

Whether I'm waking up to heartache, loss, frustration, the unknown, or misunderstanding, His Word tells me His mercies are new every morning. But what does that actually look like for my life?

As I was sitting with these questions, I went back and read the Scripture again. This time, something else caught my attention.

His steadfast love.

Hmmm. Steadfast love. What does steadfast love mean to me?

And it made me wonder what else I could find if I spent a little more time with Him and His Word.

Time for You to Reflect

1. Lord, what are You showing me in today's Scripture?

---

---

---

2. How do You want me to carry that in my day today?

---

---

---

3. Search my heart and know me today, Lord.

Sit quietly for two minutes, then write anything that comes to mind as you pray and reflect.
